

LIFE BY LIVING

Xaymara Díaz Rosado
Departamento de Psicología
Facultad de Ciencias Sociales

Recibido: 22/4/2016; Revisado: 12/9/2016; Aceptado: 30/11/2016

Watch, think, breathe...
Let even Death gaze as you sleep,
While the air gently weeps
The sweet scent of a new breed

As the golden silhouette appears
The ever awaited moment draws near
Nature will need to learn to sing
The aria of an unbridled whim

Watch, learn, evolve...
Open your eyes and look north
There you will find the resolve
The progress you need to go forth

And as the Ice eases over your skin
When the strings seize your limbs
Brandish the wings within
Free from corporeal proceedings

Dream, reflect, wake...
Let winds carry your spirit away
To lily ridden waters for your own sake
Lend love to the soul you wish to sway

And yet the Angel will say nevermore
With stories of pasts foretold
One kiss of heavens torn before
With flames and worlds to unfold